

The Humanism of Jesus

A film and discussion to follow

Wednesday, August 15, 2012 at 6:30 P.M.

We are privileged to have the opportunity to view this unique film of a highly dramatic one-person play, featuring Humanist Pioneer Joseph Ben-David of the Church of Humanism (now in his nineties!) playing six different roles.

The play was performed for four months in New York, and it presents Jesus as a humanistic personality who challenges ancient & contemporary myths about his life and reveals his true aspirations. Millions of people await the second coming of Jesus. Prophecies warn of wars, famine, pestilence, and other calamities that will afflict humanity at the time of his second coming.

But what would people really do if Jesus returned today? We know what they did to Jesus-like personalities including Martin Luther King, Jr. and Mahatma Gandhi. The show's thrust is against the tyrannical designs of fundamentalism and the threat of the Orwellian nightmare. It speaks out freely on some of the most critical issues of life and society. Might he be targeted for assassination?
